1. The subject, purpose and tasks of the discipline "Juridical deontology" as a science and educational discipline.

Juridical deontology is a branch of legal science and educational discipline, which is a generalized system of knowledge about legal practical activity, as well as the code of professional conduct of a lawyer, the optimal collection of rules of permitting, prohibiting, binding and of a recommendatory nature, which a lawyer must master and be guided by in relations that arise during the performance of their official (official) duties powers.

Collection of rules that determine the behavior of a lawyer in the process practical activity, are called standards (regulations) of it culturesю. Norms of psychological, moral, political, legal, aesthetic, informational culture of a lawyer determines his specialty activity, regulate his attitude to the object of work - the client, as well as to colleagues, and generally provide the most optimal regime and guaranteed behavior of persons in a state of their interdependence.

Deontology (from the Greek "deop" - debt, duty and "logos" - teaching) is the theory of proper research. The beginning of juridical deontology is ethics: a person's duty to behave in accordance with social laws that are established through morality. Juridical deontology was separated into a separate one branch of knowledge in the process of developing legal ethics. However, it is not the same. Juridical deontology, on the one hand, is the core, the "core" of legal ethics, and from the second - much broader in content, because along with moral and ethical culture contains other aspects closely related to it the culture of a lawyer as a person. That is, juridical deontology is only partially coincides with legal ethics without absorbing its subject and methods. It is a certain introduction to it as a special science and educational discipline, its user as a source from which it draws deontological norms. Content of Juridical deontology are like norms that are not provided with legal sanctions (ethical, aesthetic, etc.), as well as norms establishing legal responsibility for non-fulfillment of the prescriptions fixed in the official documents and regulations (legal).
